In the summer of 1991 Yeltsin established a Constitutional Convention to draw up a new post-Soviet constitution. In 1992 alone, gross domestic product GDP dropped by about one-sixth, and the budget deficit was approximately one-fourth of GDP. By using our website you agree to our use of cookies. EndPageNumber: . Realizing that the rise in mortality has been primarily a male working-class urban phenomenon enabled Professor Cockerham to eliminate both environmental pollution and poor medical care as key explanatory variables. The lack of an explanation presented itself as an intriguing research question, since rising mortality in the region was obviously one of the most important public health problems in the last decades of the twentieth century. Reformists in the Yeltsin government sought to speed privatization, hoping that the threat of a return to communism would be more remote once a Russian capitalist class had developed. By failing to establish an effective tax code and collection mechanisms, cle of the decline occurred among women under age 30 and was associated with increased use of modern contraceptives.
