Most public signs are in the official language – Estonian – but the more Russian-speaking the region, the more Russian is used in public communication and the more examples that contradict official orthography norms can be found in public space Figure 4. Conclusion It is fairly safe to say that monolingual language communities and countries are very rare.
Challenges facing the Estonian school system: the achievement gap between language-stream schools and school choice by immigrants.
