European Journal of Criminology. Following a phenomenological study of nine individuals involved in sexual masochistic sessions who regarded pain as central to their experience, [82] sexual masochism was described as an addiction-like tendency, with several features resembling that of drug addiction: craving, intoxication, tolerance and withdrawal. Janus, Samuel S. Finally, Baumeister observes a contrast between the 'intense sensation' focus of male masochism to a more 'meaning and emotion' centred female masochistic script. Page 3.
