The second way to prove a philosophy would be to introduce facts about the world, and to show that the philosophy holds true if those facts hold true. The kind to whom he or she was the most important thing, object of that unconditional love for which I had desperately yearned as a child myself and the want of which I have never gotten. In this story of a small forest town, Fredrik Backman has found the entire world. They are, as you noted, quite different! Of course, he was not the first to claim I never wish to be controlled. In the Treatise he emphasizes the distinction between the natural and artificial virtues. I loved your rubrics cube story A LOT...so much that I sent it to my 14 year old daughter because you succinctly put ideas I want her to learn in under 3 minutes that it would take me eons to convey.
